Zeta Uploader is a Windows tool that allows you to send large files by mail with minimum effort. The idea behind the program is pretty simple: users are only required to choose the files to upload, define the receiver emails, input a message and that's all. Zeta Uploader automatically uploads the files to its servers and then sends a mail to the selected recipients, with a download link included in the body. A very good thing about the program is that it doesn't require an account, as it automatically creates one when you launch it for the first time. What's more, you can protect files with a password, enable notifications for every file download and even set expiration dates for each uploaded item. Last but not least, Zeta Uploader comes with shell integration, placing an entry in the "Send To" menu to easily upload a file on the go. The footprint on system performance is minimal, but a faster Internet connection can make the whole uploading process much faster. You can upload files with a maximum size of 500MB, with higher volumes available if you agree to pay for a business license. All things considered, it's pretty clear that Zeta Uploader is one innovative piece of

It runs smoothly on all Windows versions and comes with Windows Explorer integration for a seamless uploading process. It also comes with a Windows/Mac/Linux installer, a basic tutorial that explains how the program works and a.bat file to enable/disable the Windows Explorer integration and shell integration with minimal effort. It's pretty easy to use as the interface is quite intuitive. Right after the first run, there's a downloader icon in the lower right hand corner of the window, ready to send your files on the go. The entire UI is clean and well laid out, with tabs to sort files, set file properties, upload files and manage notifications. Last but not least, the application keeps a small tray icon with a helpful status bar for easy access. Content Addon: A gallery view with a search functionality is available. This way you can find your selected files as you can use various keywords in your search. The application comes with an in-built archive management feature, which allows you to sort, archive, 6a5afdab4c

Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a binocular with a focus adjusting apparatus. 2. Description of the Related Art A binocular is disclosed in Japanese Laid-Open Patent Publication No. 2009-33956, for example. In this document, the binocular includes a focus adjusting device that can adjust the focus of a viewing optical system while the binocular is in a folded state. The binocular includes two focusing members. Each of the focusing members is attached to an eyepiece lens and an ocular housing. The two focusing members are connected by a first connection member. The first connection member is provided at an end position of an arm that connects the focusing members to the ocular housing. A connection between the binocular and a strap holder is achieved with the attachment of the strap holder to the first connection member. However, in the above conventional structure, a front end of the ocular housing is connected to a rear end of an eyepiece lens. That is, the first connection member connects the focusing members to the ocular housing, and the first connection member is located inside the ocular housing. As such, a distance between a center axis of the connection member and the connecting portion with the ocular housing is large.

When a strap holder is attached to the first connection member, a weight of the strap holder is supported by the connection member. As a result, the connection member may be bent and deformed. Further, because the distance between the first connection member and the ocular housing is large, a structure of the connection member and the connection portion with the ocular housing is complicated and expensive.
